4 of 4 review helpful Not bad but has limitations By Camber This audio presentation deals mainly with the moral dimensions of war terrorism and violence but the title is misleading because terrorism is only very briefly discussed near the end of the presentation and there is no separate discussion of violence so the focus is squarely on war The presentation describes the three primary moral positions on war Original material by Dr Nicholas Fotion Edited by Professor John Lachs and Mike Hassel Produced by Pat Childs Some think that humans are naturally aggressive and that wars are unavoidable others believe that morality demands a pacifist condemnation of all forms of violence A large middle ground involves the attempt to define "just wars" and rules have been written to govern how war should be conducted among civilized peoples Is war ever justified About the Author Dr Nick Fotion is professor of philosophy at Emory University He received his PhD from the University of North Carolina and is the author of War and Ethics A New Just War Theory and Moral Situations and Military Ethics Look
