By Franklin Merrell-Wolff : Introceptualism the Philosophy of Consciousness Without an Object Volume II

Introceptualism the Philosophy of Consciousness Without an Object Volume II:

Truth is a complex of two determinants one is the form and one is the substance In the empirical realm the form is logic and the substance comes from experience of the senses I submit that the same holds true on the metaphysical level that there is a substantive Truth attained only by the function of Realization and that there is a logical form in which it is dressed and that the logical form without the Realization becomes with respect to metaphysical material
